

RESOURCES

Home
Resources
Resource Center

TraceLink Q&A: What Does Enforcement Discretion Mean for Your Saleable Returns Strategy?

On September 24, the FDA announced enforcement discretion for the saleable returns verification requirement for wholesalers over concerns about industry readiness. As your trusted partner, TraceLink continues to stand firm in our commitment to support our customers' saleable returns verification strategy, and our belief that the industry must continue to move forward with their saleable returns verification projects.

In this on-demand webinar, TraceLink's Brian Daleiden, VP of Industry Marketing; Dan Waller, General Manager, Track & Trace; and Caitlin Czuluda, Director of TraceLink's Center of Excellence, will field all of your saleable returns and enforcement discretion questions, including:

- What does enforcement discretion mean for manufacturers?
- Why is it important to demonstrate that you are making a best effort to comply with the law?
- How much time will we need for planning, implementation, and interoperability testing?
- Why should companies continue to move forward to close this vulnerability in the supply chain?

- And more

Featured Webinars Global Track & Trace Regulatory/Compliance, Serialization United States

Register To Watch

Watch Now

Register To Watch